

MOVERS AND SHAKERS: The Washington Post promoted Krissah Thompson to managing editor for diversity and inclusion; she is the first person to hold the new newsroom position and is the first Black woman to hold a managing editor title at the paper. Intel promoted Dr. Ann Kelleher, who was head of Intel manufacturing, to lead Intel technology development focusing on 7nm and 5nm processes. Investment management firm LSIA named Karen McClintock president and CEO.

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

- Home alone. The pandemic has left adolescent and pre-adolescent girls feeling isolated and scared. With some families maintaining stricter quarantine rules than others, the loneliness is magnified on social media as girls see their friends finally getting together. Wall Street Journal
- ‘We are here.’ After the discovery last week of 27-year-old student Pınar Gültekin murdered by her boyfriend, women in Turkey began speaking out against femicide and violence. “We are here, Pınar, we will hold them accountable,” protesters have chanted at rallies. Guardian
- Rice choice. Another potential VP pick for Joe Biden? Former Obama administration national security adviser Susan Rice. She seriously considered running against Sen. Susan Collins in 2018, and, although she has never held an elected position, is in the running for the veep spot. New York Times